TROUBLES OF THE EDITOR.

The Dodson (I. A.) Times has made the discovery that the man who edits the average country newspaper cannot well avoid treading on somebody's toes continually; must expect to be censured often for unintentional failures; must expect to be called a coward because he does not "pitch into" everything that somebody thinks is wrong, and a fool if he speaks out too plainly of public evils; he must expect to grind other people's axes—and turn the grindstone himself. Still we think it is one of the noblest professions on earth; the one in which the earnest man can do the most good to his fellow man, and in which an honorable man can wield much power for good.

COTTON SEED BY-PRODUCTS.

W. C. Welborn, agriculturist of the A. and M. College of Texas, makes the following comparison of certain by-products of cotton seed:

The comparative values of cotton seed meal and the cake made from the cold pressing process for cotton seed, that is, a cake containing the hulls and meal together, is: A ton of seed when worked in the usual way turns out about 800 pounds of hulls and 800 pounds of meal. Therefore, this cold pressed cake should have a value about equal to a mixture of meal and hulls in equal parts. If the meal is worth $34 a ton and the hulls $8 a ton, a mixture in equal proportions should be worth $21 a ton. I have just consulted some direct analysis of this cake, and find that it averages just slightly better than a mixture of equal parts of meal and hulls, so it should be worth $22 as against $24 for meal and $8 for hulls.

MORACE GREELEY'S OPINION.

If you want to keep a town from thriving, don't erect any more dwellings, thus you eat occupy yourself. If you should accidentally have an empty dwelling, and anyone should want to rent it, as three times the value of it. Demand a Shylock price for every foot of ground that God has made you steward over. Turn a cold shoulder to every machine and business man who seeks to make a home with you. Look at every new-comer with a scowl. Run down the work of new workmen. Fall to advertise or in any way support a newspaper so that people abroad may not know whether business is going on in your town or not. Wrap yourself in a coat of selfishness. There is no more effective way to retard the growth of a town than these enumerated.

EVENING—A SKETCH.

(By W. S. Howell, Jr.)

Of all the times in the day to my mind the evening twilight is best, for it touches the heart with highest and finest sentiment. It is then, if ever, the blue things of the soul come to the surface. On a summer's day, 'tis sweet to stand upon the brow of a hill overlooking a peaceful valley, laid out in happy homes and thrifty farms, and to gaze upon the light and dark greens, the russets, the yellows, with now and then brilliant colors from the flowerbeds around the doorways; to note a little cabin, snuggled comfortably in its clinging vines and shrubbery, with the smoke curling lazily from the chimney in various shades of grey and ashes of roses, slowly rising and mingling with the circumambient blue. In the distance a tall, ragged ruin of forest is silhouetted against the sky. The last rays of the God of Day are just kissing the treetops good night. The tinkle of the cow and sheep bells, mingled with the homely sounds of rural life, the bark of the watchdog, the home-call of the mother goose and hen to their broods, fall pleasantly on the ear. Looking closer I see an old brindle cow come slowly up the narrow path, followed by a buxom, rosy cheeked lassie, who stops ever and anon to pick a daisy from the many springing around her path. I cannot hear, but imagine her "he loves me—he loves me not." I stand rooted to the spot, wondering which—Ah! I know from the soft blush that crimson her cheek—"he loves me," and a spark of joy flushed my own face.

Evening shadows gloom. I stand in the gathering darkness, lost in reverie over the peace and contentment of the scene. Oh, that I might stand thus forever, forgetful of the busy world—its rush and turmoil and necessity for everlasting effort! But night in her sable garments swoops down and loots out the picture. The reverie is broken, and by the flickering lights of the candle, the careful housewife has just placed in her cabin window, I pick my way thru the winding path, slowly and thoughtfully, back to civilization and "the work."

William J. Bryan will speak on the tariff in Houston on December 9. New listen for another roar from the whole menagerie. Hearken to this ominous growl from the Fort Worth Star-Telegram of Nov. 16: "Colonel Bryan announces that he is going to Brazil by way of Texas. Wherefore the neargrouch observes that if the colonel indulges a bit more of his free raw material talk Texas will see as it that his start for Brazil is a flying one. What?"

While we write this paragraph one long mosquito is buzzing about our ears and a finger holding the pencil is smarting with the poison injected through her proboscis. We have struck at her repeatedly with newspapers and hands but she is a better dodger than Choc Kelley. If we wrote what is in our mind at this moment this number of The Eagle would be unmanageable. One thought, however, demands utterance, so here it is: The hookworm is busy 'n the midst of our health officers. So there!

Says the Houston Post: "We again remind the university highbrows that it is useless to try to win a football game from the A. and M. farmers while cotton brings about 15 cents a pound." Stop your racket or you will have the whole Varsity crowd trying to bear the price of cotton.

Peary says he will not lecture, which implies of course that he won't meet Cook on the stump. Possibly he does not consider the doctor in his class, and may be this is the reason why Bailey ignored Randall's challenge and Bryan declined to meet Bailey.

That abominable X-mas" still bobs up occasionally. Might as well call a Christian an X-ian.

Luckily there are plenty of fat, juicy possums to supplement the shortage of Christmas turkeys.

Those of our exchanges who speak of a town where a courthouse is located as a "county site" should consult their dictionaries.

Says the Houston Chronicle: "The sugar trust was fined, but considering the extent of its iniquity it ought to be refined." You mean confined don't you?

Youth's Companion tells of a little boy philosopher who said: "I'd rather be a wild turkey and live in the woods than be a tame turkey and be killed every year."

Attorney General Newton says the arrest of the rangers at Galveston was an outrage. Possibly so; but who began the outrage business in Texas? Outrages on one side naturally lead to reprisals on the other.

THE BANISTERS.

What They Tell the Dwellers in New York's Tenements.

Many a gressome bit of wisdom is gleaned by settlement workers. The other day a woman of philanthropic tendencies trudged miles looking for rooms for an unfortunate family that had to move. After she had made a selection that would fit their scant means the mother of the family went around to see the rooms before moving in.

"Oh," exclaimed that wise tenement dweller, "we'd be worse off here than where we are! This place is too unhealthy."

"How do you make that out?" asked the settlement worker. "It strikes me as being better than most houses of its class."

The woman pointed to the banisters, which ran up through the five flights of stairs to the roof in a ragged, broken line. "Coffins," she said grimly. "That's what that means. Coffins is terrible hard on banisters. There are too many deaths here to suit me."

And when the settlement worker learned that many tenement dwellers really do judge of the healthfulness of a house by the condition of the banisters she concluded that that place wouldn't suit her either.—New York Press.

Could He?

If a man saw his sister fall into a well, why could he not rescue her? Because he could not be a brother and assist her too.
